

Growth Energy CEO

Short Form Bio

Emily Skor is the CEO of Growth Energy, the leading voice of America's biofuel industry. Since her appointment in 2016, she has expanded the organization's influence, membership, and impact on policy, markets, and public opinion. Under her leadership, Growth Energy has secured critical federal investments, protected year-round access to E15, and grown retail availability of higher ethanol blends from 80 locations to over 4,200 in 33 states.

Skor launched the industry's first major consumer campaign, Get Biofuel, and has led successful efforts to shape legislation, defend key regulations, and open global markets. She serves on the U.S. Trade Representative's Agricultural Policy Advisory Committee and has been named one of Washington's "Most Influential People" and a top lobbyist by The Hill.

Previously, Skor held leadership roles in the healthcare and public affairs sectors. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Wellesley College, she lives in Washington, D.C. with her husband and two children.
